The LORD ... will make straight your paths.

Proverbs 3:5-6

A "Note" from the KHCC Music Department

ROCK OF AGES

On November 4, 1740, a baby in Farnham, England, was given the formidable name of Augustus Montague Toplady. His father died in a war, his mother spoiled him, his friends thought him "sick and neurotic," and his relatives disliked him.

But Augustus was interested in the Lord. "I am now arrived at the age of eleven years," he wrote on his birthday. "I praise God I can remember no dreadful crime to the Lord be the glory." By age twelve he was preaching sermons to whoever would listen. At fourteen he began writing hymns. At sixteen he was soundly converted to Christ while attending a service in a barn. And at twenty-two he was ordained an Anglican priest.

As a staunch Calvinist, he despised John Wesley's Arminian theology and bitterly attacked the great Methodist leader. "I believe him to be the most rancorous hater of the gospel-system that ever appeared on this island," Augustus wrote.

"Wesley is guilty of satanic shamelessness," he said on another occasion, "of acting the ignoble part of a lurking, sly assassin."

In 1776, Augustus wrote an article about God's forgiveness, intending it as a slap at Wesley. He ended his article with an original poem:

Rock of Ages, cleft for me, Let me hide myself in Thee; Let the water and the blood, From Thy wounded side which flowed. Be of sin the double cure, Save from wrath and make me pure.

Augustus Toplady died at age thirty-eight, but his poem outlived him and has been called "the best known, best loved, and most widely useful" hymn in the English language. Oddly, it is remarkably similar to something Wesley had written thirty years before in the preface of a book of hymns for the Lord's Supper. "O Rock of Salvation, Rock struck and cleft for me, let those two Streams of Blood and Water which gushed from thy side. Bring down Pardon and Holiness into my soul."

Perhaps the two men were not as incompatible as they thought.
